

Walk 9

Rodborough Common to Elstead via Bagmoor, Royal, Ockley & Thursley Commons

Map:	O.S Explorer Map 145 – Guildford & Farnham
Start:	Rodborough Common car park, Milford
Grid Ref:	SU 938419
Distance:	6 miles
Terrain:	Almost flat but some stiles.
Refreshments:	The Woolpack, The Golden Fleece (serving Thai food) and The Mill – all in Elstead.

This is a good walk if you wish to include a pub lunch. Drainage ditches have recently been cut at Bagmoor which have considerably improved the terrain. Previously it was very boggy in wet weather.

Directions

Leave the car park by a footpath on the right-hand side just beyond the notice board. Continue across the common, ignoring the path off to the left at a marker post. The path bears left amongst trees between two benches with a good view to the west. A little further on join a way-marked path coming in from the left and turn right onto it. Keep on this path, again ignoring a path right at a marker post, and go downhill to reach a residential bridle way. Turn right and after a few yards pass the driveway to Riddens on the left and then go down left, past entrances to two houses, Onet and Pucklands, to a stile.

Cross the stile and follow the path ahead and shortly cross another stile beside an old gate. Continue ahead on a narrow, fenced path through the fir plantation to yet another stile. The path ahead goes across a marshy area but has been much improved (February 2025) by a wider surfaced track and a new bridge across the first stream. Go straight ahead to a second a bridge with a stile to reach a grass area with a house (Bagmoor Cottage) on the right.

This is Bagmoor Path, an old track that goes to Bagmoor and Royal Commons and on to Elstead. Bagmoor Cottage dates from the 17th C.

Beyond the bridge there is an open space in front of the house and garden. Here there is a footpath marker post. Ignore the footpath signed to the left and follow the path straight ahead to the right of the pylons. This is Bagmoor Nature Reserve.

Bagmoor Common is owned and managed by Surrey Wildlife Trust. It is an area of special scientific interest. Woodland butterflies, notably the White Admiral and The Purple Emperor are a feature of this reserve. Kingfishers, Woodpeckers and Tits, including the Willow Tit, are present.

Now continue along this narrow footpath broadly parallel the line of the pylons. The path bears right, shortly emerging from the woods to a more open area of heather and gorse. You are now leaving Bagmoor Common and entering Royal Common.

All these commons have been part of the history of the area for centuries. Over the last 250 years nearly 90% of UK heathland has been lost, so commons like these are precious. They can only survive for people and wildlife if they are actively managed.

The path now narrows and can be indistinct at times and very damp and boggy. It crosses several ditches by plank bridges which can be slippery and can also be flooded over in winter. It may be necessary to navigate around the path at these points. Eventually the path becomes drier as it enters a more wooded area and emerges at a junction of paths with a metal track ahead.

Cross over the metal track and take the footpath ahead, which runs beside a deep pond to the right. After a short distance reach a house and garden, West Pond Cottage. Go through the garden in front of the house and out of the driveway to a metalled road. Continue to the left along this road to reach the junction with a residential road, Hookley Lane, at a road-sign for Guinea Common.

At this point (A on the map) you may continue down the road until it reaches the B3001 and turn left along it to arrive at the green at Elstead.

The walk returns to this point later and so it is possible to shorten the walk here.

Continue on the clear path round the field edges. Eventually the path becomes lined with oak trees on the left and climbs to a kissing gate and then on to a junction of paths. (point C on the map).

Go through The Ramblers kissing gate ahead, keep to the field edge on the right to another kissing gate and take the footpath down the hill to the road. Turn right to reach the green at Elstead. Fork left at the green for the Golden Fleece and The Mill, which is the other side of the bridge. Fork right for The Woolpack.

Elstead has prospered in the past due to its mill, the C1300 bridge over the River Wey, sheep farming and carrots. The mill is currently a public house and restaurant. The woollen industry is recalled in the names of The Woolpack and The Golden Fleece public houses.

To make the return journey take the small lane (Back Lane) behind the Woolpack and, just before you reach a road, take a path/driveway on the right, which leads up to a metal barrier. Pass between two high hedges to reach another road. Go straight ahead up the hill signposted Hillcrest and then on to the bridleway. At the top of the hill is the junction of paths (C) reached on your outward walk.

Stop to admire the view and then retrace your steps to point (B). Do not go back left round the field edge, but instead cross the stile ahead and enter the MOD training area.

Take the path ahead and go over a crossing track to reach Ockley Common. Ignore a path off to the right and keep ahead until the path merges with a made-up track coming in from the right.

This track is very popular for families with young children for cycling.

Shortly, when the track swings sharp left at a FP post, take the footpath ahead. It widens to a sandy track and another track comes in from the left. Go over a small stream and soon reach a junction of paths with MOD signs on the left and a board ahead, 'Welcome to Thursley Common'.
